Dana knew that Wyatt was sad. No one likes losing their dog. Dana stirred the cookie batter and plopped dough onto the cookie sheet. "I hope these cookies cheer him up," she thought. She baked the cookies, then put them on a plate. Dana walked across the street and knocked on Wyatt's door. He opened it and saw Dana holding a plate of cookies and grinning wide. Wyatt gave a small smile and took the plate of cookies. "Thanks so much, Dana," said Wyatt, "I'm feeling better already."
